Understand the age you live in "Most people are not aware of the facts that are happening in the world, and they are not even aware of what they are not aware of." Noah Chomsky

"The root of boredom is either a task that you postpone doing or an emotion that you postpone experiencing. The soul and body collapse at a person's door like a creditor for everything that they cannot get in time." La Edri

"A believer can only be reformed by three things: Having knowledge in religion, being cautious and being patient in the face of difficulties." Imam Cafer-i Sadik

"Those who see danger before it comes are called Abdal, those who see it when it comes are called Fools, and those who do not see it even when it comes are called Fools." La Edri

"Men are of three kinds in terms of reason: those who understand by themselves, those who understand what is explained to them, and those who understand neither by themselves nor through others." Nicola Machiavelli

"Just as people tried to denigrate and dismiss the prophets and saints who tried to explain the truth and forbid falsehood, today they treat the people who follow their path in the same way. We live in the age of educated, ignorant and stupid people." Bulent Abdullah Turgut

Many people are running towards disasters because they do not understand the age they live in, do not take precautions against the bad developments in this age, and cannot protect their own faith and the people around them. Since I have explained the subject many times, I will briefly summarize it. You can find more detailed information through our posts on the internet. The age you live in is not simple. The powers that want to rule the world are implementing all kinds of evil projects. They cover up their actions with their local collaborators and media power and pretend that they are doing good deeds to deceive people. A Muslim must be intelligent, research, question, think, willpower and adjust his actions according to the findings he obtains.

The Age We Live In:

In Islam: The End Times (According to what is said in the hadiths, it will end within 6-7 years at most)

In Christianity: End of Times

The Period / Process We Live in:

In Islam: Divine Great Destruction / Destruction - The process that started with the arrival of the Tariq Star

In Christianity: Apocalypse - the process that will occur when the Wormwood star falls to the earth

What Will Come After This Period:

In Islam: Doomsday (will come within 40 years after the End Times)

In Christianity: Doomsday

Explanation: Everything is handled by God within the scope of causes. In other words, a number of reasons are created; events, people, processes, etc. There are also mentally poor people who want to manage this process with their own interests. It's happened a lot throughout history. Today's mentally poor people are the Satanist group that calls itself "Illuminati", that is, "Enlightened Ones". Those who serve them are called "Globalists". They are trying to bring order to the world with a project called "New World Order". They are also trying to implement many evil projects. The "Footballers" team, which also serves the globalists, numbers 2 billion people. They are preparing the infrastructure for the tasks assigned to the Globalists. They see themselves as a monument to humanity. Globalists are trying to control all faiths and religions. They are also trying to manage the End Times process. Because they know that; One process does not begin until the other is completed. The Doomsday is yet to come, but many bad events will occur during the Divine Great Destruction process.

Why don't globalists want Tariq Star to be known? What would you do if you were in their shoes and knew something like this? Would you like people not to know until the last moment and the order you established would continue, or would you like to explain it and have people come down on you? Men are already implementing the World Population Reduction Project within the New World Order. Why should they wake people up when such a planet will come and reduce the population? Globalists have been preparing for these days for 200 years. They built a lot of shelters. They are now retreating to their shelters. Why would they wake you and us? These men are working for our evil and the servant of the devil.

Illuminati and Globalists want to manage the End Times process. They know that Tariq Star is coming. They are trying to hide this from people. In any case, the destiny written by Allah is working. In this case, people are faced with two different dangers:

1. The Globalists' New World Order: These men do not spend money from their own pockets and make the world an experimental field. They are preparing for the times after Tariq Star's passing. The Jewish person whom Muslims call "Antichrist" is, according to them, "Messiah", that is, "Savior". The person whom Christians and Muslims call "Messiah" is "Jesus (PBUH)". The person whom Muslims call "Mahdi" is "Anti-Christ" according to Jews. The Battle of Gog Magog is currently ongoing. They know that Gog Magog is the one who will destroy the Jews. They also believe that these are Turks. Anatolian Turks, whom they call Gog, Asian Turks, whom they call Magog... That is why the projects of ethnic displacement and elimination of Turks in Anatolia are continuing. In the globalist games played on the unity of Turks, games are also played on the elimination of Asian Turks.

Basic doctrines of Jewish and Satanist Globalists:

When the Rothschild Family had Adam Weishaupt establish the Illuminati, they determined the basic doctrines;

- Eliminate nation states and national consciousness (aren't someone currently trying to eliminate nation consciousness under the name of religion?)
- Rule the world from one hand and control the economy
- Eliminate religions and beliefs, direct people to be uniform (eliminating religions and beliefs is not just about destroying them; showing the haram as halal and halal as haram, manipulating religious issues, adjusting religious books, ignoring the Hadiths, promoting the influence of various perverted sects (It can also be done by creating negativities such as causing the

The Rothschilds have 2 main philosophical mentors: "Frankie Jacob" and "Sebatay Levi". The name of the doctrine they use in their view of people is "Eugenism". The doctrine they use to control the Jews is "Zionism". "Evangelism" is the doctrine they use to control Christians to support Zionism. The basic doctrines of Zionists are "Talmud" and "Kabbalism". In the last 20 years, "Muslim Evangelicals" have been added to these. They are not actually Muslims, they are pretending to be Muslims.

Adam Weishaupt was sent to England after escaping a raid by the Bavarian Police. Here he was placed next to Erasmus Darwin. Erasmus Darwin was Grand Master of the Scottish Masonic Lodge. He pushed his grandson Charles Darwin very hard to engage with the Theory of Evolution. Eventually Charles Darwin escaped and went to the Galapagos Islands. In the letter he wrote to his grandfather before he died, he said, "The Theory of Evolution is a complete lie, God is real." Adam Weishaupt and Erasmus Darwin served the Theory of Evolution and the Religion of Science (Scientology) to the world. They used it as a stage to eliminate religions and beliefs from the world. Half of the people have come to worship "modern science".

The German Jewish dynasty, Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, cooperated with the Illuminati (Rothschild family, Adam Weishaupt and Erasmus Darwin). The House of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, belonging to the Wettin Great House, which was also a descendant of the German kings, began to rule England, taking the name Windsor over time. This dynasty is the 30th leader of the Illuminati. Some people with ulterior motives have recently begun to share genealogies stating that the Windsor Dynasty is a descendant of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), while continuing their activities on behalf of CHRISLAM. A woman from the so-called lineage of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) married a member of the Windsor Dynasty. If you look at the Islamic rules, there are:

- A Muslim woman cannot marry an infidel or hypocrite man.
- The lineage of a Muslim person is transmitted through the father. In other words, children are in the lineage of their father.

In the understanding of Islam, being a Seyit or Seyyide is not a symbol of nobility. Even if a person is a descendant of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), that person's understanding of thought and deeds is looked at, his piety and sincerity are looked at, his knowledge and intelligence are looked at. "Oh my daughter Fatima! Do not trust that my father is a Prophet. Do your duty of worship to your Lord, buy your soul from your Lord before you die. If you cannot buy your soul from God, I swear to God, even I cannot do anything on your behalf." (Muslim, Iman, 89)

It is of no value whether the Windsor Dynasty is related to the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH) or not. They have already demonstrated their own values as the seeds of a mentality hostile to Islam and the Turks, the flag bearers of Islam.

The order that globalists want to bring to the world basically includes the following:

- One World God (Artificial Intelligence)
- New World Order
- The State of World
- One World Government
- One World Citizenship
- One World Religion (CHRISLAM)
- 4th Industrial Revolution, Full Automation and Robot Systems Taking Life Under Control
- Elimination of Organic Life Forms and Virtualization of Life / Unmanned Life

Among the main methods used by globalists are:

- To make modern science people's belief
- Making people sick and losing their ability to think with geoengineering applications
- Destroying the world and eliminating organic life on earth with destructive technologies such as HAARP and DEW

The struggle of globalists continues in 6 areas:

- Biological Wars
- Chemical Wars
- Battles Based on Electromagnetic and Frequencies
- Psychological Warfare and Perception Management
- Propaganda Wars
- Information Manipulation (Misinformation and Disinformation)

You can research and learn the remaining topics yourself through the right sources. Local and foreign Conspiracy Theorists wrote many books and explained these. They say that the bad things they do are done by those who oppose them. Of course, according to Satan, Muslims are evil. It is important from which side you look at events and people. Until yesterday, they called the Illuminati "fabricated", but today the Illuminati started to gather fans on the internet. They don't hide anything anymore.

2. God's great game: Infidels and their supporters, the Hypocrites, have done their best since ancient times to cause hard times for believers and to drown the world in chaos. The Jews did not even hesitate to kill the Prophets sent to them. There are many crypto Jews among us; They use Muslim names and worship like Muslims. Lawrence of Arabia, one of the great hypocrites, says, "I was so caught up in spying that I was doing everything for the sake of my ideals. I was even getting up for the Tahajjud Prayer at night to deceive and use Muslims." Many people who are heedless and stupid serve them just for the sake of power, money, rank, position and fame. Most of them don't even think about what they actually serve and for what purpose. They tell them "you are doing great things for humanity" and they believe the lies. Of course, this disorderly order also has an end. God will put an end to this evil and evil trend by sending Tariq Star. There will be a "Divine Great Reset" on Earth. Since Muslims do nothing to fix the world and protect their values, what they have will be taken away. Those who can move on to the next stage will continue with nothing left. Even wars will be fought with bows, swords, sticks and stones.

"(O My Messenger! Remember) the time when the disbelievers were plotting against you (and planning) to seize you and bind you (and put you in prison) or to kill you (to get rid of you by getting rid of you, or to take you out of your country) and to send you into exile. They plotted this trick on you. While they were thinking, Allah was setting a trap for them. (By ordering you to migrate, He was making it easier for you to go to Medina and establish the Islamic state, return to conquer Mecca and defeat the polytheist systems.) Indeed, Allah is the best of those who set traps." Anfal 8/75

"He (Tariq) is such a Star that pierces (the darkness of disbelief) (deciphers the centers of oppression and evil wheels)." Tariq 86/17

"(Now) the day when all the secrets will be revealed (is near);" Tariq 86/17

"Indeed, they (disbelievers and hypocrites) are constantly planning and plotting a deceptive scheme against Muslims and Islam. (However) I am also plotting and preparing a scheme (to thwart their tricks and plots against those traitors). (So) You are the one against those disbelievers (and traitors) Give respite to the ungrateful (for now) and give them some time. (In the future, everyone will definitely see and understand the promise and power of Allah!)" Tariq 86/17

What is Surviving?

Survival is a growing idea that revolves around being prepared (mentally, physically, and materially) for disasters and calamities that can change the nature of "normal" life. This includes natural disasters (such as hurricanes or floods), man-made disasters (such as terrorist attacks), and serious disruptions to society and civilization (such as the collapse of a government). To a lesser extent, survival also emphasizes the importance of being prepared for disasters of a personal nature – job loss, the destruction of a home, etc.

Different people approach survival differently – some see it as a hobby or interest – something they do on top of their "normal" life, engaging seriously without obsessing over it. Others build their lives around it, choosing to live in secluded areas and build off-grid, self-sustainable lifestyles that do not rely on modern conveniences.

The types of situations people are prepared for also differ. Some survivalists focus on fairly common disasters that occur relatively frequently – hurricanes, earthquakes, volcanoes, etc. They just want to be ready if there's a big storm. Others focus more on apocalyptic existential threats—less common but more devastating "end of the world as we know it" type situations, such as the possibility of nuclear war or a major bioterrorist attack. Here, expressions such as "apocalypse" and "end of the world" do not actually mean the complete destruction of the world, that is, a supernova, but situations that aim to seriously destroy human existence. For example; Like a meteor falling on the earth during the Jurassic period and destroying the dinosaurs, or very few people left on earth after Noah's Flood.

Essentially, survival is a belief that it is important (and wise) to be well prepared for a wide range of possible futures. It requires understanding that you need to have a plan for things to go as expected, but that emergency preparation is also important in case things go wrong. Most people don't bother because they suffer from normalcy bias—they assume things will be fine and ignore the (obvious) risk of disaster and calamity.

The preparations people most frequently make fall into one of two categories – material preparations and acquiring skills/knowledge. Material preparations will include things like stockpiling food or medicine, installing sustainable, off-grid power sources, or obtaining secure or remote property (like a remote cabin or underground bunker).

Acquiring skills and knowledge includes things like learning to trap and hunt animals for food or learning how to identify medicinal plants in the wild. There is a wide range of survival, wilderness and tactical skills that can be useful in different disaster situations. Anyone who learns such skills in a prepared manner can be classified as a survivalist.

People who engage or participate in survival are often called survivors or preppers.

What is Survivor? What is a Prepper?

Anyone who tries to prepare themselves for the possibility of an uncertain or dangerous future can be classified as a survivalist. Sometimes people who stick to survival are also called preppers. The exact difference between a “Prepper” and a “Survivor” is open to debate, and the two terms are often used interchangeably. However, generally speaking, a “prepper” is more likely to have food, water, medicine, ammunition, etc. We argue that it is the term used to describe people who hoard resources, while “survivalist” is a term used to describe people who focus more on acquiring new survival skills. Wilderness survival skills such as searching, shooting, and crafting/using primitive tools. with special emphasis.

However, becoming a survivalist doesn't have to revolve around wilderness skills—people who focus on learning emergency first aid or tactical self-defense can also be described as survivalists. Even people who want to learn how to dress or slaughter an animal—if they do so because they think these skills will be useful in case life takes a bad turn, either personally or socially, then they can be described as survivors.

As you can see, based on the explanation above, many people are survivors (they just might not know it) – even people who only do a basic level of disaster preparation. For example, someone who stocks canned goods for hurricane season is a type of prepper. A woman who wants to learn how to defend herself is kind of a permanent thing in life. Survival is not uncommon and should not be considered a fringe move for paranoid conspiracy theorists. A lot of preparation and survival is just common sense (like being well prepared for hurricanes during stormy season). Some people choose to dive deeper and prepare more thoroughly than others, but essentially most people depend on survival in one way or another in their daily lives.

Obviously, there is a great deal of overlap between “preppers” and “survivors,” so it may be more helpful to break down the different types of survivors into more specific categories for clarity.

- 1. Disaster focused: People who focus primarily on recovering from short-term or long-term disaster situations.
- 2. Off-grid survivors: People who want to survive without relying on existing infrastructure, especially the electrical grid. These people generally do not want to be monitored or tracked by the government or corporations.
- 3. Self-defense focused: Individuals who focus on unarmed or armed self-defense to protect themselves from home invaders, looters, and other criminals.
- 4. Survivors in the wild: People who focus on acquiring the skills to survive in the wilderness indefinitely with minimal equipment.
- 5. Farm owners: People focused on creating a sustainable food source on their land

6. Financially focused: People who want to be ready to benefit from any impending economic downturn, often focusing on investing in precious metals (and more recently Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies)

7. Digitally focused: People who are aware of the threats of modern technology and want to protect their privacy as much as possible by either bypassing privacy intrusions from governments and large corporations, or by not using modern technology at all.

8. Religious Apocalypse preparations: They are people who believe that the end of days will come as predicted in a religious text. In the US these are generally Evangelical Christians, but this varies from country to country.

9. Focused on social collapse: Some survivors and preppers focus primarily on the possibility of society collapsing and institutions such as the government collapsing. This would lead to an "every man for himself" scenario, or possibly a new era of tribalism or feudalism.

What are people preparing for?

So – what scenarios are survivors actually preparing for? Obviously this question is very broad, and every prepper and survivor has their own opinions, but we've included a list of some of the more likely crisis and disaster scenarios that people like us have in mind when we think about preparing for the future.

"Mainstream" disaster scenarios

The main scenarios include all your typical natural disasters - hurricanes, storms, floods, earthquakes, wildfires, snowstorms, etc. Things like.. The type of natural disasters that occur (somewhere) every year. Frankly, exactly what you prepare for will depend on what the risks are in your area - so unless you live near a fault line, you won't prepare for an earthquake. When you examine various natural disasters such as earthquakes, floods, meteor falls, heat, volcanism and other human-made disasters from the 1970s to the 2020s, you will see an increasing graph towards the present day. In the 50-year period, there has been a tremendous increase in the number and power of disasters and catastrophes. These are not normal and cannot be explained simply by the Climate Crisis. 90% of the world's carbon emissions come from countries such as Germany, the USA, Canada, China, Russia and India. However, the cost of the Climate Crisis falls on countries with small economies and industries other than these countries. They are trying to impose an even bigger bill on people, using things like the gases released from cows, the use of petroleum derivatives, and the carbon increase caused by the multitude of people, as excuses. There is no valid scientific explanation for these. They are the same people who try to stop animal production using cattle flatulence as an excuse and who try to produce and sell artificial meat. In addition, the carbon and gas emissions resulting from artificial meat production are 20 times greater than those resulting from cattle production. People cannot live if they do not eat meat. In fact, those who put forward these do not want people to live. And yet, people watch with great anxiety as the Globalists turn the world into a chaotic fire pit. Many people want to develop alternative ways of life in the chaotic world created by Globalists. The real reason for the increase in the number and power of disasters and catastrophes in the world is that the Tariq Star is approaching the Earth.

Other main scenarios include the types of man-made disasters and crises that are unfortunately all too common these days. Things like power outages, chemical spills, and severe recessions are common enough that most people wouldn't think it strange to prepare for them. Then there are situations where people are actively prepared to cause harm - terrorist attacks, school shootings, etc.

- These are also relatively common and are also situations worth preparing for. Obviously, the actual steps to prepare for the possibility of a terrorist attack are very different from those to prepare for a hurricane, but the survivor and prepper mindset is the same.

"Extreme" disaster scenarios

Many survivors and preppers also focus on less likely, more extreme disaster scenarios. This is probably why survivors are so often portrayed as “fringe” or “paranoid” by the media. However, just because events are low-probability doesn't mean we shouldn't be prepared for them (especially if the potential consequences are truly catastrophic).

Here are some low-probability scenarios that some survivors are preparing for:

- Huge asteroid impact
- Super volcano eruption (like Yellowstone)
- Mass extinction
- Major earthquakes
- Solar flare
- Extraterrestrial threats
- Nuclear terrorism or war
- Chemical/Biological terrorism or war
- Great famine
- Nuclear energy accidents

While some of these may seem far-fetched, just because something is unlikely doesn't mean it's not worth preparing for. It just depends on how low the probability is and how bad the damage is.

These “far-fetched” risks are, in most cases, still something worth preparing for, because the consequences are (potentially) world-changing. While it's entirely possible that many of them won't happen in our lives or the areas we live in (some will never happen), that doesn't mean they aren't worth preparing for. A preparedness mindset is exactly like insurance—it's something you do so that if the catastrophic event actually happens, you have some options open to yourself.

How to Become a Survival Expert

If you want to start your survival journey (which we encourage) it doesn't have to be complicated. There are three basic steps you need to take – and by going through the same three steps over and over again, you'll be able to build the resources and knowledge you need to feel like you're ready to face whatever happens.

1. Understand your needs

Humans need some basic things to survive—we cover these needs in detail in our article on the rule of threes survival, but the short version is that humans need oxygen, shelter, water, and food to survive. Some of us may have additional needs—for example, some of us have illnesses or diseases that need to be managed with medications. Others of us have physical limitations, meaning we need other people to work with us in teams to survive. On top of the basic needs that all humans share, you'll need to take into account whatever your special needs are.

2. Gather resources to meet your needs

Let's consider the basic need for oxygen. The air is free to breathe, so there is no need to “stockpile” air. What if the air is toxic? Then we want a gas mask. What if we anticipate a long-term stay in a shelter? Then we will need a system to recycle the air in the shelter.

Here's another example: we all need food. So we need to gather resources to meet our food needs—basically, we need to stockpile food. What if the food we stock goes bad? We then need to stock (or replace our stocks frequently) foods that extend their shelf life. Freeze-dried food products have an extremely long shelf life, but require water to be edible. So if we stock freeze dried foods, we also need to stock water. Ideally, this water is hot water (although in a real survival situation cold water works – it is much less pleasant). This way we can also collect resources that will help us heat water (items that provide fire fuel or sustainable power).

The pattern here is simple. Identify a need, then gather the right resources to meet that need, then figure out what else is needed to support whatever you've gathered. Until you have a stock of resources suitable for all your needs, both universal and specific to you.

3. Develop skills that will help you meet your needs

The second level of survival is developing skills that you can use to gather resources when your abilities are exhausted or your resources are lost.

Breathable air is a survival need, and so you can logically conclude that CPR is a useful skill to learn because it allows you to help someone in medical crisis continue to breathe.

Being able to find wild food through hunting/trapping or foraging is clearly a useful survival skill as it allows you to meet the basic need for food.

Being able to gas out of a car is a useful (urban) survival skill because it will potentially give you the ability to travel further to find shelter, food, or water.

You get the idea. Becoming a survivalist doesn't have to be complicated – just pick a basic need and either acquire something material or learn a skill to help meet that need. If you do this over time, you will soon become a fairly experienced survivalist with a good stock of resources and a wide range of useful skills.

Survival Mindset

If you hang out in Prepper or Survivalist forums or Facebook groups, you'll often come across specific language like SHTF (i.e. Shit Hits the Fan / Everything Goes To Shattered), TEOTWAWKI (end of the world as we know it), or WROL (without the rule of law). While these terms are useful as reference points, they can often be intimidating to those relatively new to survival.

There's no need to be discouraged, though—it doesn't take long to learn what these terms mean (we're actually in the process of putting together a survival glossary, which we'll link here when it's finished). Also, when you're first learning to survive, it's the mindset you have that matters, not your jargon or anything else that might make you hesitate to dive in.

If you think you want to be prepared for both good and bad, you need to start preparing – don't let anything stop you.

Ultimately, being a survivalist or prepper is about having a certain mindset. The mentality of accepting this as much as we want to be able to control the world or predict the future, we cannot.

Sometimes bad things happen. It's better to be prepared than unprepared when they do, and being prepared for unusual or dangerous times means dedicating some of our hours and dollars to preparation while our lives are still normal and safe.

What is Normality Bias (and Why Can It Kill You)?

It is the instinctive delusion that makes you say "nothing will happen". It is your selfish attitude towards vital issues that weigh heavily on your soul and that you always ignore because the devil whispers to you. Even though disasters and catastrophes happen to billions of people every year, you ignore them or forget about them for a short time. When you dive into your own world, you live in your own normal. This attitude brings you closer to death.

What is Normality Bias?

In scientific terms, normality bias is a cognitive bias that causes people to underestimate the likelihood of disaster and underestimate the negative or harmful effects of a disaster as it occurs.

In layman terms, normality bias is the voice in your head that says "everything will be okay." It is misguided thinking that clearly leads people not to prepare for future disasters, such as the millions of people who are unprepared for hurricanes despite living in areas where hurricanes make landfall every year.

It's also the type of thinking that causes people to ignore evacuation orders even as disaster unfolds before their eyes. It is estimated that 70% of any population is negatively and fatally affected by normality bias when a disaster occurs.

On the one hand, cognitive bias is any pattern of predictable and repeated errors in thinking by people. It is a general term used by psychologists to describe thinking errors that affect large numbers of people, leading to distorted or inaccurate views about the world.

Does Normality Bias Affect You?

Being on this site may make you think that you are not susceptible to normality bias. But you're probably wrong.

Here's a question that can help determine whether normality bias is something that has an impact on your thinking. Remember that it's completely normal to be affected by this—it's hardwired into our brains to think this way. The important thing is to find appropriate ways to combat it once you are aware of it.

Here's the question.

Do you have a first aid kit or other emergency kit in your car?

If you answered "no," normality bias is affecting you (at least in terms of how you perceive driving risk).

Outside of diseases like cancer and heart disease, car accidents are one of the leading causes of death in the United States and Turkey (just behind suicide and opioid overdose). Everyone knows that driving can be dangerous.

On average, a person is likely to have some type of car accident every 19.7 years. Even if you haven't been in a serious car accident yourself, you probably know at least one person who was injured or killed in a car accident.

Therefore, it is clear that driving can lead to injury or death on any given day. You may think you are a safe driver, but we all understand that we are not the only people on the road, and even if we drive safely, others may not, and this can still cause us to get into accidents.

In the event of a serious car accident, first aid kits or other emergency equipment can be lifesaving. For example, you can apply a tourniquet to a heavily bleeding wound to buy time for emergency services to arrive. Storing a first aid kit in the car costs almost nothing. But how many of us actually know?

This is normality bias in action. We understand that cars can be dangerous and accidents happen, but almost none of us have done anything to reduce the risk of death or injury related to car accidents. Because we all think "it won't happen to us".

An even better example is seat belts. If you are someone who does not wear a seatbelt when in a car (backseat or front seat), then you are definitely affected by the normality bias. Seatbelts cost nothing to use and have been proven to make cars safer, so the only reason you'd choose not to wear one is because you can't imagine being involved in a serious car accident (because that's not what normally happens when you're in a car).

What Causes Normality Bias?

There are essentially two theories about why humans are affected by normality bias, and they both have something to do with our vital developmental instincts as animals.

The first theory is that this instinct is a holdover from the days when we were prey for larger, more dangerous predators. Some animals "freeze" when in danger – in many cases this is better than running because being still makes it harder for a predator to spot you. This is basically the human equivalent of the "deer in the headlights" reaction. In the face of danger, we "freeze" and our brains slow down. Our slowed down brain then causes us not to react quickly to the impending danger. In fact, after a short while, we become immersed in the world and forget it.

While freezing in place is effective for us when we are hunted by predators that are larger and faster than us, freezing in place will do us no good in the face of an evacuation order from an approaching superstorm.

Another theory suggests that people are essentially bad at understanding probabilities. If someone says, "There is an 80% chance it will rain tomorrow," our brain processes this as "it will rain tomorrow." If we saw that person the next day and it wasn't raining, we would think they were "wrong." The opposite is also true – something that has a 5% chance of happening may be processed by our brain as something that has a 0% chance of happening.

This may explain why we experience normality bias in the face of disaster. Major disasters are almost always low-probability events, so our brains constantly process them as things that won't happen.

Even if we know disaster is coming (like a hurricane), there's usually a small chance that the storm will actually be dangerous to us if we stay in our homes. Our brain responds to this by saying, "There's no way this storm will be that bad," and so we feel comfortable ignoring evacuation orders.

Examples of Normality Bias in Action

Normality bias caused passengers on the Titanic to fail to take action even as the ship was sinking.

Some of the most devastating events and disasters in recent history highlight how common it is to see normality bias even in extreme situations.

During Hurricane Katrina, for example, even though it became clear that the storm would have truly devastating effects, thousands of people refused to evacuate, believing they would be better off staying home, despite repeated warnings to the contrary.

On the Titanic, many people apparently refused to accept the fact that the ship was sinking for hours and refused to board the emergency lifeboats – to the extent that the first lifeboat was not fully occupied when it separated from the mother ship.

Research has found that during 9/11 almost a thousand people took the time to turn off their computers before trying to escape. The average person took 6 minutes before walking down the stairs. Many people sought approval from colleagues or peers before attempting evacuation.

In one incident, a 1985 aircraft engine fire on a Boeing 737 found that a significant number of passengers remained in their seats without making any escape attempts, even though the toxic fumes and fumes killed them.

Amidst the rhetoric of a global pandemic, many people were going about their business as if “everything was normal.” Airports were not closed, the flow of immigrants was not prevented, and tourism activities were not stopped. This may be because people heard from the media that the death rate was roughly 1%, and although many people died one way or another during the epidemic, normality bias caused them to write this off as essentially zero risk. People and states did not even take proper precautions. Several remedies have been put forward, and they have been shown to be open to abuse. It set a good example of human-made disasters. What was shown was not always the same as the reality. The solutions offered to you were the deadlock itself. If people were calm and knew how to ask the right questions, maybe there wouldn't be all this chaos.

To be clear, none of this is to criticize the people caught up in these disasters and reacting in this way. Normality bias seems to be part of human instinct for most of us, which means it's no surprise that it affects our decision-making unless we take specific steps to combat it.

How to Combat Normality Bias

As with most other survival hazards, the dangers of normality bias can be mitigated with appropriate preparation. This preparation falls into one of two categories. The first is materials and resources, while the second is having a prepared mindset.

The first is easy – actively fight the instinct that tells you “everything will be okay”. Don't ignore the risks you are aware of. If you live in an area affected by hurricanes every year, make sure you have an emergency kit suitable for hurricanes. If you live near a fault line (U.S. If we're talking about (mainly the west coast) – then make sure you have the right equipment and supplies to deal with the possible consequences of an earthquake. Do you live in Tornado Alley? Be prepared with the right gear to deal with tornadoes.

Now, emergency kits will vary depending on what kind of disaster you're preparing for. For hurricanes, in some cases you will want to shelter in place, whereas in the worst hurricanes you may want to evacuate. So, be prepared for either situation – stock up on some food, water, and maybe have an option for emergency power – so if you need to hide in your house for a few days while the hurricane hits, you can do so (even if the power goes out). For an earthquake, you want a survival flashlight, first aid kit, portable radio, and dust mask. You get the idea.

The thing is, you already know the most likely risks you face—but you may not be properly prepared for them yet because there's a voice in your head telling you that even if it were, your life wouldn't be that badly affected. You need to start ignoring that voice and start taking sensible precautions, especially for “known” risks that are prevalent in your area.

The second thing you need to do is more of a mental shift to work on. Essentially, you need to train your mind to respond to danger in a different way, rather than “freeze”. Often, normality bias undermines our ability to react because the danger we face is new and we do not have time to analyze or process it properly. Because stress causes our brains to slow down, we are unable to act appropriately in the face of disaster, often seeking reassurance or following someone else's lead. To avoid this we must avoid the need for reaction/analysis altogether and take direct action.

How do we do this? Easy. According to our habits, we examine that if scenario A occurs, action B is the right thing to do.

Think of the “hide and hide” drills that schools held during the Cold War, or the annual fire drills in offices, or today's school drills on what to do if there is an active trigger. These types of activities can often seem silly and pointless, but actually the purpose of these security drills is to try to teach people to overcome their “normality bias.” If you've done a drill (and you're taking it reasonably seriously), you need to analyze the situation to see what you'll do when the real thing happens. – you will know the appropriate course of action and be able to act immediately. In the event of a real disaster, skipping the analysis phase (slowed down by normality bias) could be the difference between life and death.

So how do we apply this to real life? Simple. Follow emergency procedures for the disasters you're most likely to encounter.

If you live in an area affected by hurricanes, conduct an evacuation drill with your family before hurricane season begins, which involves packing the appropriate gear and supplies into the car and evacuating in a timely and orderly manner.

If you live in an earthquake zone, make sure you and your family know how to Collapse, Trap, and Hold on—the most basic earthquake survival technique. This is definitely something you should practice with your family. Make sure your family knows not to go outside or get stuck under doors, and drill into all of this once or twice a year so it becomes a habit. This way, if there is a real earthquake, they won't have to think about what to do and won't get caught in the normality bias trap.

Now you know what normality bias is, what causes it, and how you can combat it. I hope this also helps explain why so many people are irrationally resistant to the idea of preparedness and survival. If you've ever come across someone acting crazy because you own a stockpile or because you want to learn basic survival skills (we definitely have) – normality bias is probably why you're getting this reaction. Remember—at least 70% of people show signs of normality bias when faced with disaster, so it's no surprise that the idea of preparation drives so many people out of their mind. According to them, everything is normal or will get better as soon as possible, there is no need to exaggerate. Even if you want to prepare, they will say bad things to you, humiliate you, and will not support you. Some will say "destiny", some will say "God's will", some will say "there is no escape from death", some will say "why is there any need to spend money", some will say "God will protect us", some will say "why does the state stand still?" "If something happens, he will tell us." Excuses and excuses never diminish. Even though God tells people to "be cautious", they will throw the ball to God. Even when disaster or disaster strikes, they will not admit their own mistakes. By then it will be too late anyway. States can reach a mass of less than 2% during disasters. In other words, even the disaster preparations of states are not effective activities.

Some may say "we are citizens, at most we buy a first aid kit and apply basic behavioral methods in time of disaster. The state should take the main responsibility". It is always said how resistant the houses in Japan are to earthquakes. In Japan, some special construction methods are used in buildings occupied by people living in certain places in cities, and their costs are very high. Buying a house in Japan is not easy at all and many people live in houses of 15-20 square meters. Moreover, even houses in rural areas are destroyed a lot. Even the best construction techniques can create buildings that protect you from an earthquake of magnitude M10. It is impossible to build buildings resistant to earthquakes above this level. You have almost no chance of success, especially in a country that steals its cement and iron and erects high-rise buildings on places where most are slippery. For him;

1. Disaster Plan
2. Disaster Action Plan
3. Schedule

you have to do it. You have to be conscious so that you can throw yourself into Safe Zones if things get out of hand. Even if you make perfect preparations, you will still not have a chance if you do not move to the Safe Areas in time.

Most people maintain the normal bias of saying that it is costly to prepare for all sorts of disasters and calamities. Many people do not exaggerate their cost calculations when smoking, spending on entertainment, vacationing, changing houses and cars. They are one's own normals and needs. However, preparing for possible disasters and disasters is not a priority. When a disaster occurs, everything he has acquired so far will be completely lost. People don't think about such things. After it happens to them, they complain about why people don't help them. However, at that time, other people were also living with their own normal biases.

How should I prepare?

Türkiye is already a country at the center of disasters and catastrophes. It could have fallen into much worse situations had it not been filled and strengthened by volcanic lava. Currently, the strength and number of disasters and disasters have increased. This is not because of Global Climate Change, but because the Tariq/Nibiru Star is approaching. Space observation centers such as NASA, ESA and ISS have announced its existence many times. However, since he did not officially appear on television and say "yes, there is and it is coming towards Earth", people did not believe it. Globalists never want the world order they have established to collapse suddenly. That's why they won't say anything until the Tariq/Nibiru Star appears. Ignorant people who think they are smart believe in such ridiculous things that even if states say "The Tariq Star is coming towards the Earth", those people will not believe it. The mentality that rejects information sources from past to present has been on the rise. These are people of the world and people who sleep in heedlessness. They don't care about religion, science, reason, will or anything else. They think life will go on like this. Naturally, they do not believe in the End Times and the Doomsday. People who run after daily pleasure, money and pleasure... No one can explain anything to such people. While such people make their own lives meaningless, they also make the lives of their families and those around them meaningless. Instead of the sane ones bringing the foolish ones to the right path, the foolish ones drag the sane ones down to their level. Then the sane ones come and complain about us. The person who does not struggle with the foolish and sinks to the same level is also foolish. Life doesn't care about your excuses, it cares if you're on the right track. Complaining to others will only help you relax and relax. But it does not change your bad fate in the human and spiritual world.

Which of the 5 preparation levels are you at?

At its most basic level, you either believe in preparation or you don't. It is black or white. A person cannot be half prepared and half ready. You either accept it or you don't. There is no point in making excuses, whining and complaining to the preparers and those who lead in this regard. You will only inflate the other person's mind. Indecisiveness and needing to be convinced are the worst character traits in this regard. The second table of bad characters are those who want to leave their work to the last minute. They are constantly looking for answers to the questions "when will this happen, when will this end?" They even absurdly follow the rants of astrologers.

A few basic concepts:Let's talk about a few terms frequently used in preparation, so that people's perspective on events can be well understood;

Everything's Coming Together / Everything's Going To Shit (SHTF: Shit Hits The Fan):Situations such as the Collapse of the Economy and the Collapse of Electrical Systems can be given as examples of this.

The Complete End of the Lifestyle as You Know It (TEOTWAWKI: The End of the World as We Know It):Situations such as Return to the Primitive Age with an Electromagnetic Explosion, the Colossal Celestial Body Destroying Most of the Earth's Creatures, and the New Noah's Flood can be given as examples of this.

You can find a glossary of terms used by preppers at: <https://secretsofsurvival.com/shtf-meaning-survival-terms-glossary/>

Preppers are always ready to survive life's challenges and continue living life in the best possible way even after SHTF. But when it comes to preparation, there will always be differences in methodologies, values and capabilities, among other things.

The following are the different levels of preppers and the usual scope of their preparations.

Level 1 - Basic preppers

Most people who start preparing don't even realize they've taken the first steps. They buy a few boxes of candles and buy a proper first aid kit for their home. In their minds, they're just taking a few common sense precautions. But they are preppers – they don't know yet.

Preppers at this level will have enough balanced food to last two or three days. Level 1 preppers are prepared to handle disruptions in daily life, such as power outages, injuries, and storms.

Level 1 preppers are expected to have a small set of equipment that includes lights, batteries, matches and a few tools. They will be able to find tarps, cords, various medicines and other essential supplies for a short time.

Level 2 - Ready and capable

Once you've taken the first step and accepted that it's up to you to handle life's challenges, it's easy to upgrade your preparations to deal with things that are a little more serious. (Related: Preparation 101: Prepare before shtf, then improvise as needed.)

Ascending to Level 2 is when you move beyond being ready for things that are likely to happen and prepare for things that might happen.

Level 2 preppers have tools to troubleshoot common vehicle problems. They also have an emergency kit in the trunk in case they have to spend a night in the car.

If someone in your home breaks their leg or gets a bad cut, it's best to seek professional help. However, level 2 preppers normally have the skills and supplies to handle this scenario. Level 2 preppers also have at least a few barrels of water stored for emergency use.

Preppers at this level have often been through an event before and believe in the practical and ethical values of prepping.

Level 3 - Serious survivors (survivors)

Level 3 preppers are ready to handle changes in daily life. At this level, preppers begin maintaining stocks of food, fuel, and other essential supplies. Bad winter weather can cut you off for weeks. It may take some time for the roads to reopen. If you have enough food and fuel to keep you going until life returns to normal, you're at level 3.

Level 1 and 2 preppers can handle a few hours without power, while level 3 preppers can survive an outage lasting days or weeks. It can be a generator and fuel supply or kerosene lanterns and wood stove. Either way, they're really ready.

Preparers at this level have considered all potential major threats and committed to taking specific actions to defend against them. Continuous improvement, evaluation, and stress testing are hallmarks of level 3 preppers.

Level 4 - Hardcore preppers

Things can get much worse than a bad snowstorm. Level 4 preppers are ready to leave their homes or are sufficiently off-grid to continue life after a major disaster.

They have the cash reserves to keep going and the skills and supplies to grow their own food. Preparators may naturally reach this level after years or much of a lifetime spent in the pursuit of personal preparation. They have weapons for months, including food, water, fuel, medicine, clothing, tools, batteries, and several cases of ammunition and maintenance supplies.

Level 4 preppers are also likely to have a specialized debugging tool (alternative workarounds and skills). They have the plans and equipment to deal with anything that doesn't take a direct hit from a nuclear bomb or EF5 tornado, and they know all the ways to get in and out of an area, including rural, unmarked, and highways.

If faced with a curveball, level 4 preppers can seamlessly switch gears without any hitches.

Level 5-Preparation is life

Life after SHTF is the biggest challenge. Level 5 preppers are adequately prepared to not only survive a disaster, but also to move on and begin rebuilding. They have the skills and supplies to make them self-sufficient. Level 5 preppers are ready for anything.

Preppers at the highest level will literally do nothing but prepare for potential disaster in increasingly complex detail. Whether from extraordinary wealth or complete dedication to their purpose and lifestyle, these people live, sleep and breathe preparation. (Related: Preparation tips: What you can learn from the rich about preparing for SHTF events.)

Level 5 preppers have years of food and water, ammunition, medicine, weapons caches, and every imaginable consumables, and multiple vehicles that can be brought, perhaps including aircraft, vast tracts of land (often with wells and aquifers), multiple secondary and even tertiary. Their return locations are in undisclosed locations.

Presumably level 5 preppers have gathered a group of like-minded people, family, and friends around themselves with whom they plan to survive the days after SHTF.

Let's talk a little about you

Do you intend to be a prepper and what kind of action plan do you have? You need to have definite judgments about these issues. Others cannot engage in efforts such as examining your situation, convincing you of certain things, or directing you to what you need to do. Because everyone has enough time for themselves. Moreover, most people do not approach the issue of preparation with enthusiasm and enthusiasm, and are willing to demoralize the people who lead in this regard. Many people have the thought, "If I can't do it, neither can he." However, if he had thought the opposite, he could have said, "I hope he is good, maybe he will help me in difficult times." It is very important to support people in a good way, materially, spiritually and psychologically. Very pessimistic people say "I will die and be saved", but generally such people do not die easily and they end up crawling with regret. Others cannot solve your personal problems. You will struggle with your personal problems. The people who guide and lead you are not troublemakers. People constantly talk about dreams, talk about clairvoyance, talk about having superior qualities, talk about having received excellent training, and talk about having great experiences in surviving. However, none of them have any idea how to act in chaotic processes. Because you cannot see many things when the weather is hazy that you can see when the weather is clear. Then, intelligence, sharp intelligence, ability to produce alternative plans, operational management, group management experience, knowledge and analysis, situation assessment and observation ability come into play. A person can lift perhaps 100 kg with muscle power, but a smart person can lift several tons by installing a pulley system. The difference is the power to use knowledge and reason. Both require muscle strength and effort.

First, answer these questions:

1. What type of person are you?

a. I see it's getting worse but I can't/don't do anything: You need to deal with your own internal problems or problems with your family. Others cannot solve the problems you can solve.

b. I see it's getting worse and I'm determined to do something: Decide what you want to do and be clear. If you are not clear, whine, make excuses, this will not work.

c. I am willing and diligent to do things: You're at a good starting point.

c. I allocated a certain budget to do something: A budget is necessary to buy camping equipment and do some other preparation work. You cannot be a Prepper without allocating a budget.

2. Do you know what problems you will encounter when you decide to become a prepper?

a. No, I have no idea: Then let's explain this topic to you;

- The pedantic and careless attitudes of the ignorant and stupid people around you.
- People around you saying bad things to you and humiliating you.
- Difficulties in creating a budget.
- Difficulties in finding products.
- Difficulties in creating warehouse space.

If you can bear all this and not whine to others, start.

b. Yes, I have an idea and I am willing to accept what will happen to me :)

3. Are you independent in setting budgets for preparation?

a. Yes I am independent: Start this business if you own your own money without getting into any conflict with your spouse and family.

b. No I am not independent: If you use your spouse's or family's money, you must get their consent.

4. What kind of Prepper do you want to be?

a. I will prepare at my house in the city: When the day comes, you must accept that you must prepare to take your backpacks and go to safe areas within 30 minutes and that you must learn and apply the topics of Surviving activities in the city.

b. I will prepare in the countryside: This means you have a relatively advantageous start. It may be more logical to be within Safe Areas and to establish a certain order in the countryside, taking into account various risk factors.

c. I want to join the groups: When it comes to chaotic disasters, it is more advantageous to be a nomad or semi-nomadic. The unity of self-confident, diligent, enthusiastic people with certain skills can produce more positive results.

5. With whom do you want to act together?

In normal times, it is nice to move with family and friends, but in chaotic disasters, problems snowball and tasks that need to be done are disrupted. This situation also disrupts your psychology. You can also establish a camp structure yourself. You don't necessarily have to agree with what someone else has established. However, if there is an existing structure and it brings together people from various professions, it would be beneficial for you to evaluate it. Staying in shelters or staying at home will only become a grave for you in chaotic times.

a. I'm alone: Those who are alone often look for a safe place in the community. That's why joining tribes would be a better option for them.

b. I will act together with my family and/or friends: Those who are with their family think that they can solve every problem, but family members often cannot support and even become a hindrance in chaotic times. That's why the psychological pressure of strangers and their ability to act together always works. Join a community or a tribe.

c. I want to act in community with people who can trust each other: In such a thought, camps would be the best option.

6. If there are people you will act with, what is their place?

a. We live in the same city: After making the basic preparations, those living in the same city should also plan issues such as meeting points, duration, signs and communication method with the people they will act with within the scope of the Disaster Relief Plan.

b. We live in different cities: After making basic preparations, those living in different cities should also plan issues such as meeting points, duration, signs and communication method with the people they will act with within the scope of the Disaster Relief Plan. It should be determined in advance which Safe Area will be held. Collection time should also be stated. Options are better for those who join camps. Participants in all camps may go to different camps in different places during chaotic processes. People in different cities can even go and settle in different tribes.

c. We live in different countries and cities: Those living in different countries will evaluate the opportunities in their own country. If you are preparing for Nibiru's arrival, you should return to Turkey as soon as you hear the sayha at the latest.

7. Where do you live?

a. Türkiye: If you intend to join nomads, we recommend that you join at least 3 nomads. Because increasing the alternatives will always be in your favor. It's always good to have alternative routes when you want to change location or your current location is different.

b. Foreign country: If you intend to join a tribe, it would be beneficial to join a band that is both in Turkey and close to the country you live in.

Stages of Preparation

If you've decided to become a prepper, here's what you need to do. It would not be difficult for you to act over a period of 5-10 years, especially in terms of material procurement. However, we are currently in a period of chaotic disasters and access to all kinds of products is no longer possible. You should act to procure materials within a few months.

I. Psychological Preparation

1. Understanding the age we live in
2. Explain to those around us with correct expressions (when explaining things they don't know, explain them in a way they can understand; talk about disasters and catastrophes, not Nibiru, recommend taking precautions, start with small studies on your own, send them news of disasters and catastrophes)
3. Willingness to fight against difficulties
4. Not listening to the negative statements of others

II. Getting information

"What will I do?", "How will I do it?", "When will I do it?", "Where is it safe?", "Where will I go when major disasters occur?" You should find answers to basic questions such as. You should provide basic information, publications and maps. We have prepared our work carefully, over a long period of time and through research, to meet these needs. If you wish, you can do your own work. After all, science and knowledge are there for everyone.

A. Basic Information:

1. Camping
2. Surviving
3. First Aid and IFAK
4. Bushcraft
5. Off-Grid Living
6. Gardening: Vertical Farming, Soilless Farming, Hydroponic Farming, Container Farming, Balcony Farming, Kitchen Farming, etc.
7. Communication
8. Getting Organized
9. Security

B. Support Information:

1. Maps: Safe Area Maps, Land Flooding Maps, Special Purpose Maps.
2. Buying Books
3. Creating a Digital Archive

III. Analysis

1. Identification of Safe Areas
2. Disasters and Disasters
3. Soil Survey
4. Nibiru Factor
5. End Times
6. Defense

IV. Action

1. Material Supply
2. Unity and Participation in Disaster Camps
3. Local Coordination
4. Don't Be a Prepper
5. Barter Exchange
6. Off-Grid Home
7. Personal Disaster Plan
8. Action Plans
9. Creating a Budget
10. Production
11. Cooperation Development
12. Planning for Timing and Action

V. Observation and Update

1. Disasters Update
2. Nibiru Update
3. Monitoring Developments in the World

3 Different Methods for Obtaining Publications and Oba Participation

BAT Publications are available to Preppers only and are not for sale. We are in an era where money no longer passes. Money no longer has any meaning, it has turned into stamps. Naturally, the reward for labor and effort has become priceless. Especially studies as important as ours cannot be measured with money. It is a unique treasure for people who know its value.

We work day and night, spend money to obtain information, and spend effort and money to prepare publications and projects. No matter how much you love your nation, your homeland, your values; There is a reward for everything in life. Even Allah wants some things from His servants. By giving us support and gifts, you can help us continue our work and also get what you need from us.

1. Purchasing a significant amount of our book, The Liberation Guide:You must first contact us and have our request approved so that we know who you are and your purpose. Then, you should go to the Publisher's website and purchase our book "in the quantities we specify, according to your request". Thus, you will contribute to the sales figures of our book.

2. High Support:This; It's about the support you give us on the internet and in life. It may be your serious field of endeavor or company. You may want to support us in your own area of expertise. You must contact us about the nature of the support and obtain approval.

3. Material Support:You can support us in obtaining the materials necessary for our own preparations. First of all, you can start by learning what we need. You must contact us and obtain approval regarding the nature of your support. You can get it from our broadcast packages or join camps.

SIMPLIFIED SOLUTION: 1 Obaya Single and Share Registration:

The logic is this: In normal oba registrations, people can bring 10 more people with them. In this solution, you will share the registration for 1 person among 10 people. However, all of you will be registered to the camp. Instead of 1 person bringing 10 people with him, he will take you and 9 more people like you with him. There will be recruitment for L10 stage camps.

It was created so that you can share a single Oba registration with 10 people and complete your registration easily. You will be registered with 1/10 share. When there are 10 people, a camp area is formed. When you apply, your registration is created in the oba. If you are a single person and want to register to a single camp, you can choose. You meet with us and register your name. You support us in procuring certain materials that we will tell you. If you have a family, you can register with a total of 4 people, including yourself and 3 more people. However, for this, you need to give us double support in supplying materials. Normally you need to give 4 layers, but this has been made easier. For the additional 6 people after 4 people, you need to provide 2 additional layers of support. A single participant can bring 10 more people with them. Since everyone will be in their own tent at Afet Camping Areas, it will not be a problem for strangers to come together. I hope that the people in the camping areas will understand each other more easily, since there will be people who can trust each other anyway, and especially since there will be very few people who know what to do, where to go, and what to pay attention to. This is how you can ensure easier participation with less burden. If you want to join another tribe and expand your options over time, you can contact us again. A form of participation has been created that will benefit everyone.

OTHER OBA PARTICIPATION METHODS:

- Participation in only 16 Turkish Standard Obas
- Participation in 16 Turkish Standard Obaya + 1 Gökoba
- Participation in 3 VIP Obaya + 1 Gökoba
- Participation in 16 Turkish Standard Obayas + 3 VIP Obayas
- Participation in 16 Turkish Standard Obaya + 3 VIP Obaya + 1 Gökoba
- Participation in 16 Turkish Standard Obaya + 6 VIP Obaya + 5 Gökoba

- Participation in 1 Turan Oba + 16 Turkish Standard Obas
- Participation in 1 World Oba + 16 Turkish Standard Obas
- Participation in 1 Arab Oba + 16 Turkish Standard Obas
- Participation in 1 Turan Obası + 1 Türkiye VIP Obası
- Participation in 1 World Club + 1 Türkiye VIP Club
- Participation in 1 Arab Oba + 1 Turkish VIP Oba

PERSONAL OBA ORGANIZATIONS:

When 10 people or families come together, we will create a camp by determining the location and organization. If you want to move with your own relatives, this will also be an option.

OUR WORKING INFRASTRUCTURE

Information Access System (BAT/BES)
Fair Clearing System (BAT/ATS)
Collaboration Management System (BAT/İYS)
Material Supply System (BAT/MTS)

Cooperation Offers

You will appreciate that; The work we are continuing is the most important of this time. We continue studies with scientific and religious sources and foundations. Even though there are volunteer activities, every work has a cost. We also have to develop resources to continue our work. Difficulties can arise when you are not funded by globalists and their work is tried to be hindered. We continue to work beneficially for our nation, our country, our values and our religion. The number of people who can appreciate them has decreased. It is very difficult to be an idealistic Muslim Turk in a world of people who strive for their own interests. We still appeal to people and structures that carry the nation, true religion, will, morality and reason in their hearts and minds. Such valuable work should be supported in the name of unity and solidarity against those who try to destroy our past, present and future. Perhaps, after the last shreds of hope are wiped out from the face of the earth, there will be a phase in which humans will be wiped out from the face of the earth. If we don't come to our senses, our future is extremely dark. By denying everything, you only deceive yourself and cannot comprehend the events that are taking place. After guides and leaders like us pass away from this world, you will not even be able to find your direction.

Cooperation with Publishing Houses and NGOs

If you would like to turn our current publications and future publications into a book, with a contract that will consider our rights at the highest level, please contact us. We will also add clauses to the contract. You will also bear the costs for printing. Our publications are prestigious, unique and promising. If they are advertised and promoted well, they are works that will bring a lot of profit both at home and abroad. Our first book, Guide to Liberation, became the best-selling book in the Analysis category in the first few months. It would have been even better, but it did not receive enough support due to problems that did not originate from us.

Collaboration with Phenomena

If you cooperate with us in the promotion of our book, we will register you in our VIP groups. You can establish rapport with us and ask us your questions whenever you want. We will give you advice depending on the level of your friendship. You will receive our invaluable support.

Cooperation with Municipalities

If you support us in printing and distributing our books, promoting our publications, and organizing Bushcraft and Prepper Events, we will make the best possible Disaster Action Plan for your district or province. You carry out your final work by making the necessary evaluations with your own staff.
